Through the Chesapeake Bay Watershed Agreement, the Chesapeake Bay Program has committed to...

Goal: Water Quality

Outcome:

Continually improve the capacity to monitor and assess the effects of management actions being undertaken to implement the Bay TMDL and improve water quality. Use the monitoring results to report annually to the public on progress made in attaining established Bay water-quality standards and trends in reducing nutrients and sediment in the watershed.

What's in an outcome?

- Our outcome in the 2014 Watershed Agreement has nothing to do with affecting change in bay health.
- Our outcome is about having data and tools, i.e., capacity, to do assessments of watershed and bay conditions
- And our outcome is about providing reports of bay and watershed water quality trends.

Goal: Water Quality Outcome:

Continually improve the capacity to monitor and assess the effects of management actions being undertaken to implement the Bay TMDL and improve water quality. Use the monitoring results to report annually to the public on progress made in attaining established Bay water-quality standards and trends in reducing nutrients and sediment in the watershed.

Considerations

- What have learned about what works well towards achieving goals and outcomes
- If something hasn't worked well, how might we improve our effectiveness and efficiency as the CBP?

What have learned about what works well towards achieving goals and outcomes

If something hasn't worked well, how might we improve our effectiveness and efficiency as the CBP?

Language of the Agreement is a subject area of discussion – will we keep the same language, adjust outcomes, create new one's, drop old one's, etc.

We have an opportunity to offer suggestions toward maintaining our existing outcome, or, amending/editing it to reflect updated ideas about what an effective outcome for WQ Stds Attainment and Loads/Trends results should mean
